

CONSUMER CORNER BRINGS ENERGY EFFICIENCY TO YOUR FINGERTIPS

New addition to IMPA website provides consumers with tools and resources to reduce energy consumption

CARMEL, IN, May 30 – Municipal electric customers in Indiana don't have to look very far to find out how to live a more energy efficient life. The Indiana Municipal Power Agency (IMPA) has launched a Consumer Corner addition to its website at www.impa.com/consumer-corner.asp.

The Consumer Corner is an electric customer's link to energy saving tips and other useful information about the world of electricity. Whether its lighting, heating and cooling, or appliance questions, some of the easiest and best tips are here to reduce energy usage and put money back in a customer's pocket. The site even features links to online energy audits, where consumers enter some simple information regarding their residence and receive customized recommendations for home energy improvements.

Each year, the average U.S. family spends more than $1600 on utility bills. That figure doesn't even include the amount of gas it takes to power the millions of cars on the road every day. As the wholesale power provider to 51 cities and towns in Indiana, IMPA is doing its part to help 300,000 electric customers reduce their consumption.

Have fun exploring the Consumer Corner, and thanks for doing your part to promote energy efficiency!
